

It is astonishing that you are apparently considering permitting the concentration of broadcast information in stil fewer hands. I learned long ago in school that the broadcast spectrum is public property which the government supervises to assure public access over these relatively few channels to the broadest possible diversification of news, information and opinion if this republic. The FCC has already gone much too far in the opposite direction. Please do not move further toward delivering our information channels to a few monopolists whose interest is not the public good but private wealth.
